

Summer Weeks Spiritual Ecology

Methods of Perception in Nordic Nature

Formative Forces in the Landscape
Empathic Nature Observation
Meditation Research
Ethereic Geography

Languages: German, English, Norwegian

Meløya (Northern Norway) July 3-14 2018

optional trip to Lofoten July 14-19; the first week July 3-8 can be booked separately

Dirk Kruse: Meditative Observation of the Landscape through Imagination, Inspiration, Intuition

Dr. Manfred Schleyer: Formative Forces in Living Nature and the Threefold Human Being

Martin Hollerbach: Trees, Landscape, Agriculture

Organization: BALDRON non-for-profit association - baldron.org, Youtube: Baldron TV

The Summer weeks "Spiritual Ecology" want to invite you to "read the book of nature" together in a sommer retreat with excursions on a scenic island in arctic see, bathed in the light of the midnight sun.

Three qualified specialists in spiritual research and nature will contribute to plenary and working groups: Dirk Kruse, Dr. Manfred Schleyer, Martin Hollerbach. In addition there will be guest lectures.

summerweek.baldron.org
facebook: baldron.no/events

What is at stake

Welcome to the Summer Weeks Spiritual Ecology 2018 on the island of Meløya. Now in its third year, we have pushed the border further and further north, into more and more spectacular landscapes, into ever deeper soul experience: from the gentle hills of the Harestua Sun Observatory to the dramatic Alpine Scenery of Jotunheimen (Giants' Home) – and now far far north into the land of the midnight sun.

“Meeting the sun at midnight” has been a well-known pattern in occult tradition; it refers to the ultimate disclosure of the inner reality of things in the light of understanding (based on self-knowledge). The unique quality of the polar regions of Norway is that it offers you such mystical experiences to your naked eyes, melting together sense perception with soul experience and communion with the elementary world of nature spirits (if you listen carefully inwards). No wonder the term (and the method) “Deep Ecology” was coined by Norwegian rebel academic Professor Arne Næss....

Is science today travelling to its own end; dogmatically barren and intolerant to the pure sensorial perception of nature, which was once the very base and source of inspiration for its culture-forming power? Are we going to find a track where wonder, questioning and self-reflection are the guiding forces for researching nature?

Info: summerweek.baldron.org
Facebook: baldron.no/events
organized by baldron.org

Norway, in the west of northern Europe, has rough, almost overwhelming forces of nature. In the elementary forces of the bedrock and the water, in the exuberance of light – everywhere one can feel invited to experience nature in its spiritual, living-being essence. Imaginations and inspirations are as if spread out in the landscape

Building on the pioneer events since 2016, which evoked enthusiastic acclaim by participants and dialog partners alike, this year's Summer Weeks Spiritual Ecology reaches even further with an extended two-week program in the land of the midnight sun: in a laid back, dialogic, summer-holiday atmosphere, under the wide sky and in open perception, with a big heart and focused thoughts.

The Summer Weeks invite participants to learn how to read in the book of nature with artistic, soulful precision, at an open-air retreat on an island near the Lofoten. During the first week, you will acquire the tools for a deeper observation of nature and in the second week we invite you to accompany us to the peaks and valleys, beaches and islands of the area. – What can happen when people, folk souls and the beings of the land – the little and the majestic ones – meet eye to eye, in dialog mode? We kindly invite you to be part of a dialog of the living!

